Alfie Mc – English – Thursday 18th June

I have a dream that every single soul will have plenty to eat to live happily and healthily

That stomach's wont rumble like deafening thunder in a ferocious storm

That everyone would live in comfort, clothed, clean and cared for

That people would feel warm, well and free from illness and disease.

I have a dream that our children will be able to read and write

That they will absorb information like a thirsty desert in the scorching sun

That they grow up to have prosperous jobs and a fruitful life

That being educated lessens prejudices against our brothers and sisters.

I have a dream that there would be kindness and care shown towards others

That we could live in peace without hurting each other in wars and conflicts

That less crimes and callous acts are committed leading to upset and anger

That the whole world can live like the best of friends

I have a dream that there are equal opportunities for all

That men and women will work together, being rewarded the same

That working side by side they won't be judged unfairly, arguing like cats and dogs

That children grow up respecting each other's talents and feelings

I have a dream that our picturesque planet can be polluted no more

That our seas can flow and shine brightly like crystal clear diamonds

That our land will be free of litter and our recycling bins full

That animals and plants will breathe freshly in the clean air.

I have a dream that not one single racist word is spoken

That not one solitary person is judged by the colour of their skin

That protests would not be needed as there would be no reason

That despite the colour of skin there would be equal rights for every person in our land.

These are my dreams. These are my wishes. These are my hopes. This is our future.
