I have a dream

I have a dream, that one day our world will see that everyone is equal, and everyone should feel welcome to our beautiful world as we are all humans. Everyone should have rights no matter of their religion or the colour of their skin; Nobody should feel threatened and bullied because we are all human. People are no longer living happy lives because of those sick people.

I have a dream, that nobody will ever starve on our entrancing world. Everyone should be healthy. Nobody should not have water that is as clean as a whistle.

I have a dream, that one day our world will see that being mean to people is not a good way going around life. Everyone would be as happy as a glistening star dancing in the midnight sky. Nobody would get their house burgled by thoughtless people.

I have a dream, that our globe will one day be a unit and face challenges as one. Countries should all be friendly as we drive forward in life. There should not be violence around our sphere.

I have a dream, that one day everyone living on this orb will have a home to live in. Nobody should be living on the streets and it is distressing having to imagine life like that. Everyone needs shelter, especially in the winter.

I have a dream, that one day people will see that they should stop destroying animal's habitats. Animals will become extinct and that will be our fault and ours only. Animals will live less time and that will reduce the number of creatures which in centuries will be terrible.

These are my dream, will they come true? Who knows? If only they did. Only time will tell.
