I have a dream that pollution will stop infecting the heart of our planet

That our seas will become untangled from the grasp of poisonous plastics

That our planet will no longer choke on the chemicals churned into the air

That the polar icecaps can stop shedding their melting tears

I have a dream that no matter what the colour of your skin everyone can have equality

That people of any colour, creed or religion can live in harmony and peace

That the foul-mouthed racist rants will stop spreading their language and hate

That the warmth and spirit of human kind can light up our planet in a symphony of happiness and joy

I have a dream that the homeless of our planet can feel a solid shelter of protection

That they can experience the warm embrace of walls around them

That they can feel the cosy comfort of food in their empty bellies and crystal clean water

That a home can envelop them in its welcoming arms

I have a dream that deadly diseases will disappear

That virulent viruses can find a vaccine

That medical research can thrive to heal and cure all illnesses

That suffering can finally fade away like the sun setting on a new horizon

I have a dream that animals can live freely without fear

That the canopy of the trees can protect them from danger

That the trees can breathe abundantly to fuel our planet

That there will be an end to all extinction

I have a dream today!
