I have a dream by Seth Barratt

I have a dream that racism will no longer exist.

That people will not notice the colour of your skin but accept that we are all the same on the inside.

We can stand together hand in hand, shoulder to shoulder with all our brothers and sisters and form a strong unbreakable chain that will withstand anything.

That we will all live together in a peaceful world.

I have a dream that there will be no more bullying.

Every man, woman, boy and girl will realise they are all unique and special and have their place on earth.

No one will ever be made to feel they are worthless. Each person will have the courage and strength of a mighty Lion.

That all people will have a voice to laugh, shout, sing or cry out loud confidently without the fear of being bullied.

I have a dream that there will be no homeless people living on our streets.

Everyone will know what it feels like to have a warm, safe bed for the night.

That nobody will know the feeling of an empty grumbling stomach every day, as they will be fed.

Homeless people will feel the warmth like sitting next to a roaring blazing fire on a cold wintery night.

I have a dream that our world will be disease free.

That we will be able to meet with our friends and family again and hold them tightly in our arms.

That all children no matter where they live will have the same medical care and chance of survival.

That diseases that rip through your body and destroy life; like a grizzly bear hungry bear, will be no more in my perfect world.

I have a dream that families who have a lot of money and food will share with their neighbours who don’t have much.

Happiness comes from what you give and not what you have.

That all people will sit around a table together and share food and friendship.

That everyone will know the warm feeling you get in your heart when you share with someone and make a difference.

I have a dream that pollution will be no more.

Our skies will always be bright, clear and clean.

That our seas will be crystal clear, and sparkle like gems, with no plastics floating.

That animals will be spared from extinction and roam around the land, happy and safe.
